Trust Ostermilk to feed him

If breast feeding fails, you can turn to Ostermilk with the utmost confidence; for its purity, digestibility and nutritional excellence are vigilantly safeguarded by all the experience of Glaxo Laboratories.

The roller process. The heated rollers turn inwards, transforming the liquid milk into a fine, sterilized powder and modifying the protein so that it will form a light, flocculent curd in the infant's stomach.

secret of Ostermilk's digestibility. Roller-drying makes rmilk easy to digest. The milk protein is gently modified ng food values unimpaired. Herein lies the virtue of the o manufacturing process—as experience has shown.

'REGAL'

In addition to its growing acceptance as a most suitable bottle-feed for normal full-term babies, there is ample evidence of the value of evaporated milk for feeding prematures. [1-2]

Very tangible evidence indeed of the progress made on 'Regal' evaporated milk is given by these triplets — Martin, Lindsey and Linda — who at birth weighed 4 lb. 4 oz., 4 lb. 15 oz. and 3 lb. 13 oz. respectively. Pictured here at 7½ months, their weights were 16 lb. 6 oz., 16 lb. 14 oz. and 13 lb. 6 oz. Their mother writes: "There are not three bonnier babies anywhere. I am more than pleased with the easy and convenient way the 'Regal' feeds are made."

Ambassadors of Nursing

THIS ISSUE GOES TO PRESS during the annual meetings of the Royal College of Nursing, held this year in London, attended by nurses from all over the British Isles and some from Commonwealth or other countries eager to meet and discuss with their fellow-members matters of importance to their profession as well as to enjoy the social events in a busy and widely varied programme extending over three and a half days.

At this time of year such meetings have their counterpart in many countries where nursing is held in equally high regard and nursing occasions are of deep concern to ordinary citizens and to the members of allied professions. In these days of rapid transit it is possible for individual nurses to attend one or more of these occasions within a relatively short span of time. This is illustrated from recent journeys of members of its headquarters staff reported in the June News Letter of the International Council of Nurses, which mentions the visit of the general secretary, Miss D. C. Bridges, C.B.E., to Canada, where on June 23 she addressed the opening session of the 50th anniversary convention of the Canadian Nurses' Association in Ottawa. First-hand reports of these meetings including an international session on Nursing in the World Today and in the Future to be addressed by Miss Agnes Ohlson, president of the ICN, and Miss Lyle Creelman, chief of the Nursing Section, WHO, will be published in the Nursing Times whose editor, Miss Marjorie L. Wenger, flew to Canada to attend the convention. Incidentally, Canada's public health and nursing services are being nationally honoured by the issue of a five cent purple stamp bearing the portrait of a nurse.

Travelling in the opposite direction, Miss Ellen Broe, director of the Florence Nightingale Education Division, represented the ICN at the Eighth Middle East Medical Assembly in May, at the American University of Beirut. The three-day assembly was attended by between 400 and 500 doctors and about 100 nurses, this being the second occasion that a nursing programme within the framework of the assembly had been arranged. Miss Astrid Janzon, who is director of the State School of Nursing, Stockholm, was this year's invited nurse speaker: she contributed a paper on The Nurse as a Member of the Health Team at the first general session. At a symposium held at the University School of Nursing on the following day five nurses spoke on Meeting Nursing Needs in the Changing Middle East, one of whom said: "We are part of the great drama of change from tent to skyscraper and from camel to spaceship; and to help people from the tents to find their feet in a modern hospital is no small undertaking." At another session Miss Broe spoke on International Co-operation in Nursing, emphasizing the privileges as well as the responsibilities which are attached to membership of an organization such as the ICN.

International tension in the Middle East meant that Miss Broe had to cancel her plans for further contact with Lebanese nurses after visiting Jerusalem, where she had meetings with members of the Jordan Nurses' Association. Writing of her journey to the Middle East, Miss Broe says: "To correspond with people can be a useful means of communication, but to meet personally and have the opportunity to exchange views and ideas is in most cases a much more valuable experience."

Yet another continent is covered in the News Letter's report that Miss Gwen Buttery has recently returned from South Africa where, during a three months' stay, she visited a number of centres and addressed 28 meetings of European and of non-European nurses. It is stated that through these contacts she was able to stimulate a wider interest in the ICN and to assist non-European nurses in making the necessary adjustments in order to conform to the terms of the new Nursing Act in South Africa.

The annual meeting of the World Federation for Mental Health, to be held in Vienna in August, will be attended by, among other nurses, Miss Alice O. Sher, assistant general secretary, ICN, who at the same time will visit schools of nursing and hospitals in Austria.

In the United States, representative nurses have been attending the 10th Anniversary Commemorative Session of the World Health Organization held this year in Minneapolis, followed by the 11th World Health Assembly, among them Miss Agnes Ohlson, president of the ICN, and

Royal College of Nursing Appointments

MISS H. MARJORIE SIMPSON, B.A., S.R.N., Industrial Nursing Certificate, at present tutor to occupational health nursing students in the Education Department has been appointed to the post of officer in the Professional Association Department at the College. This new post has arisen following a reallocation of duties at headquarters and in the light of current developments within the profession. Miss Simpson, who joined the staff of the Education Department in 1942, and has since taken an honours degree in sociology at the London School of Economics, trained at St. Thomas' Hospital, and entered industry during the war after taking the industrial nursing certificate at the Royal College of Nursing in 1939. In 1948 she travelled for three months in the United States and Canada, visiting hospitals, schools of nursing and industrial health departments. As a registered postgraduate student at the London School of Economics, Miss Simpson is at present undertaking research into the nursing profession. With this wide experience and her more recent work as nursing consultant to the World Health Organization Regional Office for Europe in connection with the seminar on 'The Nurse in Industry' held in London last year, Miss Simpson is well prepared for the type of work which her new duties will entail. Her many friends in the profession will join with us in wishing her success in the new work. The post of organizing tutor in the Education Department, which becomes vacant through this new appointment (see supplement i of this issue), offers fresh scope to nurses interested in teaching and administration.

Miss Wenger in Canada

ON HER SECOND DAY in Montreal Miss Wenger visited the Reddy Memorial Hospital to learn about their Home Care Scheme, the first to be started in Canada, of which a nurse, Miss Betty Wright, is supervisory secretary. After lunch with Miss Dora Parry, director of nurses, Montreal Children's Hospital, she spent a fascinating if somewhat exhausting afternoon touring that very fine hospital of 385 beds which has daily visiting for parents from 2 to 6 p.m. and a unit where mothers are admitted with an infant or toddler. Each week a number of cardiac operations are performed and there is an excellent recovery unit where such cases are nursed for as long as is necessary. First news of events of the 50th Jubilee Convention of the Canadian Nurses' Association in Ottawa this week is awaited as we go to press.

Diploma in Nursing Course

A TWO-YEAR COURSE leading to the Diploma in Nursing will begin in September at Mount Street Institute of Further Education, Liverpool, sponsored by the Liverpool Education Committee. The course is open to qualified State-registered nurses and prepares them for Part A only of the Diploma. Entry to the course is limited to those engaged in full-time ward duties, with the exception of domiciliary nursing. Sister tutors and those whose duties do not comply with this restriction are not eligible. Further information may be obtained from the principal, L. B. C. Howard, Esq., at 26, Upper Duke Street, Liverpool 1; telephone ROYal 7725. The Royal College of Nursing welcomes such opportunities for study at provincial centres of education and would like to see similar courses in other parts of the country.

The Association of Hospital Matrons

THE MINISTER OF HEALTH and Mrs. Walker-Smith attended a reception given by the president and members of the Association of Hospital Matrons in the John Astor Nurses Home at The Middlesex Hospital on June 20. Guests were received by Miss D. M. Smith, O.B.E., president, and Miss M. J. Marriott, hon. secretary of the Association, with Mr. A. J. B. Goldsmith, F.R.C.S., consultant ophthalmic surgeon, and Brigadier G. P. Hardy-Roberts, C.B., C.B.E., secretary-superintendent of The Middlesex Hospital. Matrons of hospitals in all parts of the country who were attending meetings of the Association held in London on June 20 and 21, with other distinguished members of the nursing and medical professions and hospital administrators, enjoyed this happy and informal occasion in the spacious sitting-room of the nurses home which was gay with beautiful flowers.

International Students Party

FORTY-SIX STUDENTS from 18 countries entertained lecturers and guests at Florence Nightingale House recently to mark the end of another academic year. Sponsored by the Florence Nightingale Memorial Committee, the occasion was a sherry party where guests and students mingled happily in the lounge or on the lawn. Students have been studying in London under scholarships, awarded by various authorities, which enabled them to take advanced courses in one of the several fields of modern nursing. Florence Nightingale House, 173, Cromwell Road, where Mrs. Mary Lavender is the warden, has been their residential headquarters over the past year.

ROYAL NATIONAL PENSION FUND FOR NURSES

DAME ELIZABETH COCKAYNE, chief nursing officer, Ministry of Health, as guest speaker at the annual general meeting of the Royal National Pension Fund for Nurses, held in the Cowdray Hall at the Royal College of Nursing on June 10, said that nurses should understand more about superannuation than they did. She was supporting the remarks of the chairman, Sir Charles Hambro, K.B.E., who urged upon matrons and others who advise nurses leaving one branch of the profession for another not to accept cash value for contributions already paid into one scheme but to apply for transfer value or to join the Federated Superannuation Scheme for Nurses and Hospital Officers and apply for transfer value from their former employment. It was not, Sir Charles had said, in the interest of herself or the community at large that a nurse should be tied to one branch of the profession.

Continuing her talk, Dame Elizabeth eloquently described 'the thinking nurse' taught—by group discussion rather than the lecture method—about opportunities for nursing abroad and the possible effects of what she termed 'inbreeding' in the hospital service; taught also to develop a 'money sense', to appreciate the importance of saving and the changing value of money, with some understanding of investment and its effect on world affairs. All this, she suggested, would be stimulating, too, for the tutors, who might perhaps invite a financier to come and talk to the students; it would develop an inquiring mind and lead to valuable general knowledge.

Speaking as one at the end of her nursing career, Dame Elizabeth went on to say that she believed the nurse's influence today was deeper and wider than at any time. "How fortunate we are to be able to attract such sterling characters to the profession" she added after remarking how different the attractive pictures of young womanhood now entering nursing were from those of years ago. Despite changes in nursing itself the sympathetic approach to the individual through understanding and other essential qualities remained the greatest gift it was in the hands of the nurse to give to her patients.

Sir Charles Hambro, replying to Miss F. N. Udell's expression of appreciation, said that with most of the Council members it was a matter of pride and family tradition to serve the Fund, the growth of which from assets of £20,000 to nearly £17 million was a great achievement. During 1957 over 10,000 new policies were issued and the premium income of almost £1 million was an all-time record. At the end of that year the fund was paying annuities totalling £301,000 per annum to 4,749 pensioners.

Form and Function in the Human Brain

by DR. MURRAY BROOKES, Department of Anatomy, Liverpool University.

THE HUMAN BRAIN is the greatly expanded upper end of the spinal cord, lying within the skull which affords it protection. Although it is now common knowledge that the brain is a structure composed of nervous tissue it was not always so regarded. As late as the 17th century, it was thought to be a glandular organ whose vital secretions passed along peripheral nerves to the muscles which were thereby activated.

A striking characteristic of the human brain is the great development of the cerebral hemispheres (Fig. 1). Each has three poles, frontal, occipital, and temporal. The whole is covered by grey matter, the cerebral cortex, which is largely composed of the cell-bodies of neurones, or nerve cells, arranged in a characteristic six-layered fashion. This type of cortex is peculiar to the primates, from which animal group man has evolved. In the lowliest of the primates, the tree-shrews which feed on insects and in many respects resemble hedgehogs, the cerebral hemisphere just manages to assume a three-polar outline.

Fig. 1. Lateral surface of human cerebral hemisphere.
[from Gray's Anatomy, Longmans Green]

As we ascend the primate scale through evolutionary time, we find firstly that the temporal lobes and a Sylvian, lateral cerebral, fissure develop, as in the bush baby belonging to the lemur family. Then the occipital pole enlarges in tarsius, the night tree-climbing animal with big eyes, which possesses a calcarine sulcus (Fig. 2) in its occipital cortex, presumably associated with increased efficiency in seeing. In the monkey, a central sulcus appears on the surface of the hemisphere behind which is a distinct band of cortex associated with skin sensation, and in front of which is a similar band of cortical tissue, the so-called motor area. Another band of cortex in the temporal lobe, just below the Sylvian fissure, is also definitely recognizable in the monkey and is called the auditory area, for the reception of hearing.

In the chimpanzee more sulci, or grooves, appear in the cerebral cortex, which reaches its full development in man who has acquired numerous cortical bands or gyri in the frontal and temporo-parietal lobes of the brain. This great increase in cortical area is largely composed of undifferentiated six-layered cortex, and has no special features as that found in the visual, auditory, general sensory, or motor area of the brain just detailed.

The abundance of this iso-cortex in the human brain is the anatomical basis of the distinguishing feature of man, the ability to think, to abstract, to make concepts. This ability is exemplified in the region of the cortex adjacent to the visual calcarine sulcus, known as the visuo-psychic area. With our calcarine cortex we see letters on a page, but with our visuo-psychic area we understand that the letters symbolize the meaning which they are intended to convey. A similar audio-psychic area is found adjacent to the auditory gyrus in the temporal lobe. Nevertheless, most of the frontal and temporo-parietal lobes are correlated to all aspects of human intellectual activity, and not necessarily limited to visual or auditory stimuli.

The human brain is composed of other neural structures besides the cerebral cortex. Fig. 3 represents a frontal section through the brain showing the main nervous structures underlying the cortex. The thalamus is a great mass of nerve cells wedged between the lateral and third ventricles. The latter are cavities in the brain, full of cerebro-spinal fluid. Below the thalamus is another collection of groups of nerve cells or nuclei known as the hypothalamus. Separating both thalamus and hypothalamus from a third nuclear mass, the corpus striatum, is a massive bundle of nerve fibres—the internal capsule. These fibres either come from the periphery, that is, from skin, muscles, joints and viscera, passing up to the brain, or arise in the various brain structures and pass down into cranial and spinal nerves to act on muscular or glandular tissues.

Neurones within the brain are connected with one another so that the great nuclear masses do not function in isolation, but all are integrated into the harmonious activity of the brain as a whole. One neurone is connected to another by means of the synapse, that is, the contact of the terminal fibres of the axon of one neurone touching the cell body of another neurone or its dendrites. In this way one neurone can be acted on by several nerve cells, and its own terminal fibres can act on many other neurones. In the structure of this synaptic connection of one nerve cell with another lies the basis of the highly complicated build-up of neuronal circuits within the brain, which are correlated with complexity of cerebral function. Nevertheless, it is possible to speak of the major portions of the brain, cortex, thalamus, and so on, as being co-ordination centres for specific activities.

The Thalamus and Sensory Organization

The thalamus is the great sensory co-ordination centre of the brain. It receives nerve impulses derived from the skin, muscles, joints, etc., and sorts out pain impulses from those of proprioception and a variety of other sensations. After crossing over the myriad synapses within the thalamus, these impulses are sent to other brain regions as well as the cerebral cortex. Sensory stimuli before reaching the cortex must relay in the thalamus or associated structures such as the medial and lateral geniculate bodies for audition and vision respectively, before being projected elsewhere.

Some thalamic cells will project their sensory information into the post-central gyrus, the area for general skin sensations. Here it is possible to show by electrical means, or by the study of cases of brain tumours, that particular portions of the post-central gyrus correspond with particular skin areas in the periphery. Such cortical localization of peripheral sensory regions is well seen in the calcarine cortex of the occipital lobe, points of the visual cortex corresponding to points in the retina; and again in the auditory area of the temporal lobe, where point to point localization can be made out between this gyrus and different levels of the cochlea in the inner ear, the organ of hearing.

Co-ordination of Movement

The sensory information received by the cortex is ultimately passed on to motor areas by means of association tracts in the cerebrum. The pre-central gyrus is the outstanding motor area in the cortex, where again we find there is a point-to-point correspondence between this gyrus and muscles bringing about movements of the body. It is probably fair to say that it is not particular muscles which are represented in the cortex, but movements. This is demonstrated by the rapid re-education a patient shows

Fig. 3 (left) Frontal section through the human brain, illustrating the main co-ordination centres. The pituitary body is shown in dotted outline because the plane of section is at a different level.

Fig. 4 (right). An isolated Betz cell from the motor area of the brain [from D. A. Sholl, Organisation of the Cerebral Cortex] who has for example an extensor tendon in the forearm transplanted so as to produce flexor movements of the hand. A muscle and its peripheral nerve which have carried out extensor movements have been forced by cortical domination to perform flexor movements.

The pre-central cortex is peculiar for its abundance of large triangular cells, the pyramidal Betz cells (Fig. 4). The axons of these cells pass down the brain through the internal capsule into thse pina cord, where they are known as the pyramidal tract. These fibres synapse with cells in the grey matter of the cord, whose axons then pass to the muscles as peripheral nerves. Destruction of the pyramidal tract by haemorrhage leads to paralysis. Nevertheless, only a minority of the nerve fibres concerned in motor function are derived from the Betz cells in the pre-central gyrus. Large numbers of motor nerve fibres originate from the frontal lobe and the corpus striatum. All motor nerve fibres which are not derived from the pyramidal Betz cells in the pre-central gyrus are known as extra-pyramidal nerves. The corpus striatum is their great co-ordination centre.

The corpus striatum and extra-pyramidal nerve fibres control automatic movements, and are responsible for the smooth working of the highly complicated reflexes involved in postural, behavioural or instinctive activity. The corpus striatum reaches maximal development in the birds. This can be correlated with the complex patterns of avian behaviour which are pre-formed, that is, are not learned, and are described as being instinctive. Given the right set of environmental stimuli, the bird automatically embarks on a migratory flight, whose manner and destination are pre-determined. Another example of striatal function is seen in the complicated courting behaviour of birds in the appropriate season and circumstances. In man, many of the functions of the corpus striatum have been taken over by the cerebral cortex, or come under the influence of the hypothalamus and its connections.

Autonomic Mechanisms

The hypothalamus is a nuclear mass lying in the floor and on either side of the third ventricle. It is intimately concerned with the co-ordination of autonomic responses, that is, with the regulation of the internal environment by means of sympathetic and parasympathetic nerves. The control of temperature for example is a hypothalamic function. Two types of neurone are thought to be involved, the one reacting to a rise, the other to a fall in blood temperature. Owing to the connections of neurones of the former type, which are located in the front portion of the hypothalamus, a rise in blood temperature brings in its train an increased heart rate, vasodilatation of the skin vessels, sweat secretion, and panting respiration. All these diverse activities result in heat loss, and would restore blood temperature to normal. If the blood temperature falls below normal, heat conservation reactions are brought into play by the second group of hypothalamic cells. Shivering is important in maintaining a normal temperature in a cold environment.

Just how the hypothalamus is connected to peripheral muscles and how they are made to shiver is not known, but animals whose hypothalamus is destroyed experimentally cannot shiver, and become poikilothermic—their temperature falls to that of the environment. Aspirin dulls the activity of the heat production cells in the hypothalamus and reduces body temperature.

Certain groups of cells in the hypothalamus possess the richest blood supply of any in the brain. There is a considerable body of evidence now available to show that these cells are neuro-secretory in function, and that their secretions pass along their axons through the pituitary stalk into the posterior lobe of the pituitary gland where they are stored and liberated into the circulation as anti-diuretic hormone. The latter is carried by the bloodstream to the kidneys so that the normal urinary output of about 1.5 litres per day is maintained, and not an output of 20 litres as is found in diabetes insipidus, a destructive disease of the hypothalamus. There is some evidence too that a connection exists between the hypothalamus and the anterior pituitary gland, which if substantiated would place the body's hormones under the controlling influence of the brain.

Definite nerve pathways are known to exist between the hypothalamus and the rhinencephalon, which comprises inter alia the hippocampus and the gyrus cinguli (see Fig. 2). The hippocampus is found in the temporal lobe of the brain and terminates near the amygdaloid nuclear cell mass. Numerous reflexes responsible for the maintenance of blood pressure appear to be co-ordinated by portions of the gyrus cinguli, and it is here that reserpine acts in lowering high blood pressure. What is even more remarkable is that the hypothalamus and rhinencephalon together seem to be correlated with emotion. Hypothalamic lesions can make a normal cat become very savage, gluttonous and hyposexual. Destruction of the amygdaloid nucleus can reverse this effect. Lesions of the anterior part of the gyrus cinguli seem to produce docility. The sensory side of emotional behaviour is normally under cerebral cortical control, some of the nerve pathways in this inhibitory activity being known. Frontal leucotomy as practiced on depressed, mentally-ill, patients depends on the severance of these inhibitory pathways with the consequent release of emotional experience into the conscious mind.

It is interesting to note that certain drugs are now available known as hallucinogens which seem to modify the quality of the mind. One of them, known as L.S.D. (lysergic acid diethylamide), in very small doses comparable to those of vitamins and hormones produces a schizophrenic syndrome while it acts in normal volunteers. They are peculiar in that the volunteer has insight, that is, he knows his mind is deranged. From researches into the field of hallucinogens it is reasonable to suppose that there is a biochemical factor involved in the causation of psychotic illness.

However, the normal human mind is correlated with the extent of the association areas of the cortex. Here complex neural circuits have been developed which enable man to record past experience in his memory, and permit him to learn and make rapid temporary adjustments to his environment. But the paramount importance of the human cerebral cortex is that man has thereby been conferred with the ability of symbolic thought.

The relationship of the mind to the neural circuits of the brain, however complex these may be and however much integrated into the activity of the brain as a whole, nevertheless remains extremely obscure. To paraphrase Gertrude Stein, a nerve impulse is a nerve impulse is a nerve impulse; it is much more than the simple action potential recorded by the physiologist.

It is quite unknown how nerve impulses are interpreted by the individual as the redness of a sunset or feelings of docility and rage. Without the occipital cortex we cannot see, but this does not permit us to say that it is the cortex that sees, rather than the mind. Although it is possible to envisage a memory as something like a printed circuit in the brain, we must confess our ignorance of how the conscious mind can open up that particular circuit and recollect at will past experience, although it is recalled that Sherrington dubbed the will as a 'naive inference'. Without aesthetics, morals and religion man would become a creature resembling Kirilov in Dostoievsky's The Devils with a logical drive to suicide. Until we know much more about the function of the brain, it behoves us to distinguish this from the function of the mind.

Increasing X-ray Hazards for Staff

AT a recent Walsall inquest the coroner asked why the deceased had not been X-rayed earlier and the reply was given that, owing to lack of staff, an X-ray on the day of admission was impossible and it had regrettably been delayed. Later a hospital spokesman said that the radiography staff consisted of only two women and they were so hard pressed that they were having daily blood counts in order to ensure that they were not being unduly exposed to radiation (see page 723, June 20).

The British Medical Journal comments upon the Home Office's reluctance to ban X-ray machines from shoe shops, which is what the Medical Research Council advises; the Ministry asks that no one person should have more than 12 X-rays of shoes per year and asks that shop assistants keep well away from the machine.

Nurses are frequently exposed to X-ray hazards while supporting ill patients; in at least one London hospital the trained staff in the gynaecological wards wear X-ray sensitive plaques which measure the radiation they are exposed to when patients have radium implants. We should be interested to hear from readers what precautions, if any, are taken in their hospitals.

Learning to Live Internationally

by DAISY C. BRIDGES, C.B.E., R.R.C. S.R.N., S.C.M., General Secretary, International Council of Nurses.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO there happened a very important event in my life: my attendance at the 25th anniversary conference of the Canadian Nurses' Association held in Toronto in 1933. I was a night sister at the time, and one day at about midday, when I had been in bed and asleep for an hour, I was suddenly awakened and summoned to matron's office; she was sending me to Canada. She had been invited as a representative to the 25th Anniversary Conference, and could not go herself.

Today, when I think about that conference, I can truly say I have never been quite the same person since. When I got back matron said I never settled down again. That was not quite true, for I returned to night duty and remained on the staff for several years; and except for the war years, when the Army sent me to several countries overseas, it was actually 15 years later that I became actively concerned in international nursing affairs.

And yet that Canadian Conference did something to me. I learned how much professional organization meant to the Canadians—their membership in the Canadian Nurses' Association and in the International Council of Nurses—and therefore professional organization began to mean more to me also. I met nurses from a number of other countries and learned, I hope, to be less insular and to be interested in their affairs. The result was a changed outlook and attitude of mind.

How tremendous have been the changes in the world during the 25 years since that time—progress in medicine and surgery and anaesthetics and antibiotics, developments in nursing and nursing education to keep us in line with this progress in science and scientific discoveries; changes, too, in methods of transport and of communication. It seemed a long way to Canada in 1933. Two years ago I went around the world and visited five countries between Easter and Whitsun.

In these 25 years the world has grown smaller, and seems to be closing in on us. The important thing for us is to learn how to adapt ourselves to these new and exciting and sometimes rather frightening conditions—in fact, how to live internationally.

Nursing Organizations in Britain

I believe there is considerable confusion about the ICN in this country. I was first aware of this confusion in the minds of many British nurses when I was travelling in a crowded troopship to Egypt in 1941. There were some 7,000 of us on board, of whom 80 were women; I used sometimes to arrange lectures and discussions and one day I opened the proceedings by saying "Shall we today discuss professional organization? Since you are all State-registered British nurses, you will all know the difference between the General Nursing Council for England and Wales, the National Council of Nurses of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Royal College of Nursing, the International Council of Nurses, the Nursing Division of the Ministry of Health"—and I believe I mentioned several more nursing departments and organizations, but was concerned at the unresponsive look which came over all their faces. No one volunteered the information. In fact, one of them said, "I don't understand why in Great Britain we have a National Council of Nurses and an International Council of Nurses—surely they both do the same thing? ! "

The answer, of course, is that the National Council is a British organization concerned with nursing affairs in Great Britain; and we of the International Council look upon the National Council, as one of our 63 member or associate bodies. The staff of the International Council must therefore only spend approximately one-sixtieth of their time on nursing affairs in this country. Of course, I realize that I myself contribute to the confusion by being British, but this is purely incidental. My predecessor as general secretary was an Austrian nurse; her predecessor was Danish, and her predecessor again (who was the first secretary of the Council) was American—no other person than Miss Lavinia Dock, who was secretary for 23 years.

It is also confusing to British nurses that the headquarters of the International Council is in London, but this, also, is incidental. The headquarters were in the United States during the war years, in Geneva from 1925 to 1936, and could be removed to any other country if our board of directors so decided.

The ICN and How it Works

And now I must tell you something about the ICN—its history, its objectives, its activities and how it works. It was founded in 1899 by a British woman, Mrs. Bedford Fenwick, at the end of a century when organization for women was practically unknown. Membership was offered to national nurses' associations which could show that they fulfilled certain requirements—that they were representative of the nurses in their countries; that they were non-political, not supporting any one political party; that they were self-governing—that is, governed entirely by nurses; that in their membership they embraced all religious faiths, no one being excluded on account of his religion. And under a constitution which incorporates these requirements, and with very few changes, the ICN has existed ever since, and now has an unbroken record of 59 years. In fact, we shall be celebrating our 60th anniversary in 1959.

If an organization is to be influential in nursing affairs it must have both objectives and activities. The objectives of the International Council are quite simply to help in developing and maintaining the highest standards of nursing service in those countries which are in membership, and in helping those countries not yet in membership to comply with the requirements of our constitution which will enable them to join us. Our second objective is to promote, in every possible way, a spirit of friendship and fellowship among the nurses of the world.

We have many activities, and I only propose to mention a few. We maintain an information centre on nursing and nursing education, so that we can make this information available to our membership throughout the world, as and when required. We assist refugee nurses in any way we can, and maintain at headquarters a register on which are several thousand names of refugee nurses whose credentials have been proven. Most of them have no hope of returning to their own countries, and because of the situation in which they find themselves have many personal and professional problems which we try to solve whenever our help is sought.

We make and maintain international relationships with other organizations which are also in the field of health or social welfare; and one of our most important relationships is with the World Health Organization, with which we have been in official relationship since 1948. We sponsor international congresses and conferences; we also sponsor a number of publications, and in particular I would like to mention our quarterly journal, The International Review.

Why is it considered important that nurses should know about the ICN? The first reason is because nurses are the International Council of Nurses! The ICN is not, as some people seem to think, a small office in Westminster, although that office is a busy place where a comparatively small staff try to co-ordinate the activities and carry out the wishes of our members throughout the world. The Council is actually made up of the 450,000 individual nurses who, through their National Nurses' Associations, are our members; and British nurses therefore, who are an important part of that membership, have a right to know what we do, and should be interested in our affairs.

The second reason seemed to become clear to me when I was reading the Sunday Times a few weeks ago and came upon the following description of a conversation in a No. 2 bus. It went like this:

Conductress: "I haven't seen you for a long time."
Chinese Gentleman: "I've been away."
Conductress: "Somewhere nice, I hope."
Chinese Gentleman: "Yes, very nice—China."
Conductress: "Oh, was the weather good?"
Chinese Gentleman: "Yes, very good."
Conductress: "Well, that's the main thing isn't it?"

World Affairs—Do We Care?

The sad thing is that I am afraid many of us are like that conductress. Does the weather matter more to us than the fact there are 600 million people in China, and we do not really know whether they enjoy their present régime, and what is the extent of their social services—who looks after them in health and sickness and in old age?

We grumble that we have a shortage of nurses, when we actually have one to 300 of our population. Are we even vaguely conscious of the fact that there is one country, which until a few years ago was a British responsibility, and where there is one to 100,000? Indeed, there are some countries where there are almost no nurses at all.

Are we interested in the fact that the world's population is increasing at the rate of 5,000 per hour, 120,000 per day, and 43 million per year? An increase which will double the world's population by the end of the century. And in this connection, do we think more of our own physical needs than of the fact that even now one-third of the world's population exists at the starvation level, and two-thirds of the remainder are always underfed?

We speak with pride of the fact that our tuberculosis rate is steadily decreasing. Do we ever pause to wonder how it is in other countries? I can tell you of at least one country where a few years ago one person per minute was dying of tuberculosis.

Are we worried that in many countries, mentally ill patients occupy between 40 and 50 per cent. of hospital beds? Are we aware of the fact that up till 10 years ago three million people died each year of malaria; and although with the new drugs the death rate has been cut by 30 per cent., nevertheless three-quarters of the world's population live in malarial zones, and this is still an international problem?

Finally, and almost most important of all, does it worry us that 40 million people, through no fault of their own, are refugees from their own countries, with very little hope of returning; and that two million are still eating their hearts out in refugee camps? Towards the end of the last war when country after country was being occupied and suppressed and the inhabitants subjected to every sort of indignity, it was our Archbishop of Canterbury who said he doubted if there had been so much unhappiness in the world since the 12th century. But can we say it is a happier place now, and if not, what can we, as nurses, be doing about it?

No Barriers of Creed, Class or Colour

At this point let me make one thing quite clear—we do not have to cross the Atlantic, or to travel anywhere in order to learn to live internationally. All we need is a realization that in our profession we have no barriers of race, or creed, or class, or colour, or nationality; and that as nurses we are citizens, not of one country only, but of the world. Learning to live internationally means an attitude of mind rather than any action you need necessarily to take.

There are, however, two things I suggest you might do, and one thing I beg that you will do. I suggest that you should be interested in professional organization, international as well as national. Visit our headquarters, which is your headquarters as well as mine; learn more about your work and register a subscription to our international nursing journal.

Secondly, I suggest that you try to master at least one language besides your own. Half of the misunderstandings in the world are due to ignorance of each other's languages.

And what is it that I beg you to do? I know that you must have many nurses from other countries in your hospitals. Some are training, some are trained; some are refugees and many have sad hearts and a longing for a country they will never see again. Make up your minds never to lose a single opportunity of saying the kind word and holding out the hand of friendship. I know you are busy, and they are sometimes slow and difficult, and there are times when we feel we just cannot be bothered. Do you perhaps feel about them, like the lady who wrote to the director of an agricultural college and asked, "What am I to do about the dandelions on my lawn?" and got the answer, "Dear lady, learn to love them!" That, indeed, is a very good answer, and I commend it to you, together with the following verse:

"So many gods, so many creeds,
So many paths that wind and wind,
But just the art of being kind
Is all this sad world needs."

Some Diagnostic Procedures

1. LIVER BIOPSY

DIAGNOSIS is no longer a matter solely of clinical acumen. The physician relies more and more on diagnostic procedures for help, many of which he can carry out himself. Some such as lumbar puncture are firmly established, while others are either relatively new or are only performed in certain special circumstances. This intermittent series deals with some of the latter. All such procedures have a certain basic similarity from the nurse's viewpoint, for example as regards the setting required and the care of the patient, and therefore the emphasis will be on the indications for their use and the special nursing problems involved.

Liver biopsy is "a simple procedure, performed at the patient's bedside under local anaesthesia." It is most often carried out in patients with cirrhosis, jaundice or liver enlargement, but may also be of value in the diagnosis of conditions such as miliary tuberculosis, sarcoidosis and amyloid disease which often involve the liver. With due care, much of which devolves upon the nurse, the incidence of complications is less than one in a hundred, a figure which compares favourably with other diagnostic procedures.

Before the biopsy the blood group and prothrombin time should be determined. Vitamin K is given intramuscularly if the latter is prolonged, and a pint of blood should be ready if there is any possibility of bleeding. A mild sedative will allay anxiety, but the patient must be able to co-operate.

He lies flat, with the right side along the edge of the bed and the right hand above the head. The area of liver dullness in the axilla is found by percussion, and the skin over this is infiltrated with local anaesthetic. The pleura, which is very sensitive, is similarly anaesthetised. Finally a small nick is made in the skin with a scalpel.

The simplest biopsy needle is a trochar and cannula about six inches long. This is inserted until the pleura is felt moving over the tip as the patient breathes. He then breathes out as far as possible so as to displace the lung upwards, and holds his breath. The needle is plunged into the liver, the trochar removed and a well-fitting 20 cc. syringe is attached to the cannula. Suction is applied as the cannula is rapidly withdrawn. With practice this series of rather complicated manoeuvres can be completed within 30 seconds.

Biopsy needle about to be inserted. Note nick in skin in right axilla, and 20 cc. syringe ready to hand on patient's abdomen.

If successful a sausage of liver tissue about half an inch long is obtained. This is sectioned and stained in the laboratory, and provides the pathologist with a microscopic cross-section with which to make a diagnosis.

The patient must stay in bed for 24 hours, the pulse being recorded hourly for the first twelve of these. A careful watch is kept for signs of bleeding or peritoneal irritation. Slight discomfort is to be expected and may be relieved by simple analgesics and sedatives. Any severe pain or shock must be reported immediately.

Ten Steps Forward

World Health 1948-58.—by Ritchie Calder. (WHO publication, H.M.S.O., 2s. 6d.)

In these days of increasing ease and acceleration of travel, public health merges into world health, and this book therefore becomes a useful textbook for the student nurse, both pre- and post-registration. It is not, however, truly described as a textbook so much as a best seller for off-duty reading. Whatever your taste in leisure-time reading this book is likely to appeal, for it is a modern fairy story, a story of adventure, of modern history and of applied science. Once begun it is hard to put down. Of the 68 pages, 24 are photographs only, so its first reading will not take you very long. You will, if you are a tutor or public-health minded, wish to re-read the various chapters, or stories, at various times. It is exciting and heartening to read of the triumph of knowledge over evil. It is challenging to be reminded how great the need still is in many countries for good things we now take for granted. The text is non-technical enough to lend to non-nurses. It is detailed enough to hold the attention of any nurse.

Nursing in Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat

(10th edition).—from the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital. (Saunders, 31s. 6d.)

This is a well designed attractive book with the clear print and plentiful illustrations so common in American publications.

As the preface states, this 10th edition has been reorganized to segregate the principles and techniques of nursing care from the medical treatment. It is said that this allows more space for discussion of actual nursing care, but it is disappointing to find that even so, this subject is treated very superficially. For example, no detailed account of the general preparation of the patient prior to cataract extraction is given, although this care is cited as being the basic necessity for all patients undergoing intra-occular operations.

To nurses outside the United States of America the chapters dealing with drugs and preparations are confusing, names, spelling and phraseology being so different from those in English use. This also applies to the names of instruments, and it is doubtful whether real help is obtained from the photographs of tray and trolley settings which, although good, do not give sufficient detail to make equipment and instruments easily recognizable.

Much emphasis is placed on the preparation of surgical dressings, the care of bronchoscopic and other instruments, and tests for hearing and labyrinthine efficiency.

Chapter headings are well planned, and the index allows for easy reference.

It is doubtful whether a British student nurse in a general hospital would find much of value in this book, although someone doing a course in these specialties would probably enjoy comparing treatments and techniques.

Anatomy for Nurses

—by D. V. Davies, M.A., M.B., B.S. (The English Universities Press, 20s.)

This is, as one would expect, a competent book which covers the subject most comprehensively. Each system has been taken in turn, which often makes rather dull reading and in the opinion of the present reviewer neither encourages the student to think nor makes her relate her knowledge to her practical experience. Some of the diagrams, indeed, instead of emphasizing the marvels of the human body seem deliberately to make it appear as ugly as possible. A rough technique may pass on the blackboard where the students see a diagram developing but its reproduction in a book gives an impression of carelessness and inaccuracy and the resulting diagrams are far from clear. The drawings of reticular tissue, the liver lobule and the lateral popliteal nerve illustrate these points while the diagram showing the medulla oblongata and pyramidal tract seems to mislead through its shading, and the foot, seen from the side, could never walk. If exact observation is expected of a student these points would seem to matter.

On the other hand there are many useful figures such as those showing the muscles of the mouth and oropharynx and the diaphragm seen from above, while that of the hepatic portal system of veins is clear, careful and attractive.

The text is easy to follow and quite explicit though some authorities today would question the account given of tissue fluid and other readers might wonder why so much detail is given of the minute structure of the parathyroid and adrenal glands without a hint of function to aid memory.

The chapter on regional and surface anatomy is an excellent addition to the usual subject matter of nurses' anatomy books and the section on the newborn infant and postnatal growth will please many keen students. Also the introductory chapter and the glossary will prove most helpful. This book will undoubtedly find its way to many libraries and bookshelves.

Talking Point

LAST WEEK we published a letter from a correspondent who wrote that it seemed as if the mantle of the old battleaxes of the feminist movement had fallen upon certain nurses, and in the same issue reported the matron of northern hospital telling a parent-staff gathering of a high school that she did not agree with men coming into the profession—"we have the maternal instinct and it is not the role in life of men to do the nursing."

Was the maternal instinct a predominant feature of the feminist movement? Somehow I doubt it and yet where does this feminist feeling originate? Is there perhaps a connection between the New Woman of the earlier part of the century and the establishment of nursing as a profession? Is it not possible, as our corresponden suggested, that some of the atmosphere of that period of struggle still remains? Consider some of the dates. In 1916 the Royal College of Nursing was founded; in 1918 a limited Women's Franchise Bill was passed and in 1919 the first Nurses' Registration Act was put on the statute book. Is it possible that this is the seat of our matriarchy? Do we still feel we must Stand Up for our Rights?

One can only feel sorry for the poor men in this matriarchal set-up. Prevented from holding commissions in the nursing services of the Crown, debarred from membership of the Royal College of Nursing, stopped by the law from delivering babies, one can only feel that they must have a preponderance of the vocational element to stay in the profession at all.

Are we really justified in carrying on this fight today? Isn't there something just a little old-fashioned, faintly absurd, about it in 1958? Aren't we being guilty of just rationalizing our prejudices? Many people who will happily consult a male gynaecologist blanch at the thought of a male nurse. This feeling may be real, but it is irrational and quite illogical. Let us at least be honest about our emotions and try not to delude ourselves.

It seems to me that there are many, many nursing procedures which require not so much maternal instinct as mechanical ingenuity. Tidal drainage never brought out the mother in me, nor the fixing of a Balkan beam. But we must all have had occasion to be grateful to porters and male doctors for assistance in such matters, who, despite the handicap of their sex, were kind and considerate to the patients and helpful to the nurses. Can we not be a little more adult in these matters and if we still feel superior, regard the lesser male with a more urbane tolerance?

But wait, I see in the week-end papers that at an annual teachers' conference a male speaker is crying out that women are ruining education and that the continent is about to be flooded with overpaid women teachers on holiday. So who am I to try and stop the Battle of the Sexes?

WRANGLER.

Uniform and the Nurse of Today

by JANE L. DICKSON, Student Nurse, St. Mary's Hospital, London, W.2.

"UNIFORM—A DRESS of the same kind to distinguish persons who belong to the same body." Thus the dictionary defines the word 'uniform'. Is there necessity for wearing uniform in this day and age of individual freedom and thinking, and what is its purpose? That it is still necessary for nurses must be accepted in the face of the following facts. It is designed to protect both the patient and the nurse; it denotes that the wearer is a bona fide person of status in the hospital to both patient and visitor; it differentiates between grade and rank, and it is the accepted dress of any service. In addition it emphasizes a unity of purpose, and gives the wearer authority, self-confidence, and a sense of discipline.

Meeting Present-day Needs

Today, many of the uniforms worn by nurses, and particularly by those in the older hospitals, are old-fashioned and uneconomical to launder. They are hide-bound by tradition in their designs and colours. It must be pointed out, however, that many of these traditions have had to be modified and adapted to meet present-day needs and standards. No longer do the nurses of The Middlesex Hospital, London, wear trains to hide their ankles when bending to attend to patients, since modern advances in bacteriology advocate short skirts (to say nothing of fashion) which do not activate dust and microbes from the floor, nor do present-day standards of behaviour demand such excessive modesty.

Although Florence Nightingale advocated a formal training scheme for nurses as far back as the 1850's, and the first training school opened in 1860, a recognizable uniform did not come into being for some long time. A photograph taken at Guy's Hospital, London, in 1880 shows that nurses were still allowed to wear brooches and ornaments, caps of different designs, and even aprons of different colours. The dresses were of heavy material with many folds and drapes. The caps were frilled and in some cases trailed down the wearer's back. The cost of laundering such caps in these days would be formidable. Whether it is due to the age of the photograph or not I do not know, but the appearance of these good women is of unrelieved gloom, and one can imagine that although they must have been warm (almost too warm at times), active movement must have been rather restricted. With the coming of the First World War, the developments in that very young science, microbiology, the emancipation of women, and the Nurses Registration Act of 1919, which gave nurses a professional standing, nurses' uniform became more standardized.

Another photograph taken in 1918 shows a group of girls in identical uniforms, skirts about three inches above their ankles, wearing stout lace-up shoes, and short cloaks; but again the impression of their uniform is of drabness, and even ugliness. There is no suggestion of feminity; the uniform might have been designed for inmates of a prison.

That was the past, but what of today and, more important still, the future?

The emphasis today is on cleanliness, neatness and good styling. However it must be made at a reasonable price, withstand constant and not over-gentle laundering, and be cut to allow free and easy movement in any direction.

Caps—

Caps are still worn in most hospitals, though not so frequently by male nurses. Although the justification made for wearing it is that it restrains the hair, this has been proved a fallacy since, when there is a real necessity to cover the hair, as in the operating theatre, the caps are exchanged for theatre caps which are all-enveloping and close-fitting. It seems, then, that caps are mostly worn for tradition's sake, and they are one of the more attractive traditions. Most have diminished in size, from the original designs, due to the modern trend for short hair, and the fact that they appear slightly incongruous to the modern eye in their original form.

Dresses are for the most part made of cotton regattà. Again and again new materials have been suggested and tried in the past, but it is claimed that this type of material is still the best for the purpose, since it can be obtained with a smooth or slightly fluffy finish, does not shrink unduly, can be boiled with impunity, and is extremely hardwearing. A great many nylon dresses of the overall type are being worn, but these mainly by private nurses who have to make their own arrangements for laundry. They are not altogether suitable for hospital wear because in the operating theatre they may generate static electricity. In addition they are expensive and do not take kindly to mass laundering, neither are they sufficiently warm. On the whole the dresses, although neat and practical, are uninspired in design.

One cannot but envy the Canadian and American styling, eminently simple but well-cut dresses, so well illustrated in the Nursing Times of October, 1955. The styles incorporated V-necks, raglan sleeves and Peter Pan collars. The uniforms were all white (a practice not to be recommended in this country) and were made of Dacron, a type of terylene. Seersucker was used in four out of 10 of the designs.

Belts are worn in some hospitals, though by no means all, and when worn are often used as a means to distinguish one grade of nurse from another. This, though economical, is not the most satisfactory method.

—and Aprons

In many hospitals an apron is worn over the dress, and this is either buttoned on or pinned to the dress as an integral part of the uniform; some of the newer uniforms are being designed with an apron that is removed when the nurse leaves the ward, so that she does not eat her meals in the same garment in which she does dirty work. From the point of view of the nurse this practice is to be recommended highly, but this does not get over the difficulty (for example) of a nurse taking a bedpan from one patient and then doing a sterile dressing in the same apron for another patient; though it must be said that some hospitals are supplying aprons for sluice duties of all kinds.

The question of shoes and stockings is a delicate matter, and one over which there is much controversy. Black shoes and stockings are more commonly worn than brown, and these are of the 'Oxford' style. They are supplied by the nurse who, rightly or wrongly, feels that since these are part of the uniform they should be supplied by the hospital. Alternatively an allowance might be made to help with the expense. Recently the government has allowed nurses to make a claim of £5 in their assessment of income tax, but as this allowance is against taxable income only and not against the actual tax assessment most nurses feel that it is out of proportion. Are not black shoes and stockings old-fashioned? Oddly enough, this criticism is more often made by outsiders than by the nurses themselves, a fact that was noted with some surprise by a recent hospital uniform committee set up by one of London's teaching hospitals. Certainly a greater uniformity is possible when black is worn, since brown stockings and shoes are obtainable in a variety of shades. Another criticism often levelled is at the style, but a nurse does a phenomenal amount of walking and must wear a shoe that will support her feet.

Uniform Designed by Nurses

What will be the pattern of the future? Will caps continue to be worn, will terylene prove to be practical, should the uniforms be designed by the nurses themselves, should uniform be abolished altogether, or should nurses wear a similar uniform throughout the country?

In 1955 the Newcastle Regional Hospital Board laundry sub-committee offered prizes for designs by nurses themselves for uniforms for nurses, both male and female, and for sisters. The prizewinning designs were to be made up in the material chosen by the competitors themselves and tested for laundering suitability, times and costs. At the same time a survey was made of types of materials, designs and the need for certain articles of dress, such as caps. In addition the reasons for wearing uniform were discussed and whether these reasons were still valid. In the report by this board it was felt that uniform was still necessary on grounds previously mentioned, that caps were no longer necessary unless they were to be made to cover the hair completely, and that aprons should be retained. Nylon was not recommended owing to its expense and the fact that it generates static electricity, but it was suggested that nylon accessories might be practical. It proved impossible to try out terylene. It was stated that it was cheaper to launder detachable collars, that turn-back cuffs of the same material or indeed any double thickness of material were impracticable, and that buttons should always be detachable.

The designs themselves were quite attractive, but not spectacular, as was to be expected, since these were amateurs competing. In one design a blouse and skirt was illustrated, and one wonders if this might not be adapted to sisters' use. Whether this would be a good idea for nurses is doubtful, because of the need for a costume of which the largest part in contact with the patient is to be easily changed and laundered, that is an apron. However, as most sisters do not have to perform the practical duties expected of a nurse, this might be an attractive alternative.

Will caps continue to be worn? Since they no longer have a function to perform, and therefore are an additional and unnecessary expense to the hospital, one cannot but think that they will have no place in the hospital of the future.

As to whether uniforms should be similar throughout the country, whereas it would effect a great economy, due to mass production, there is no doubt that there would be a great outcry all over the country, were this to be seriously suggested, and perhaps some of the pride which nurses feel in their professional and their particular training schools would be lost. This would indeed be a pity, for it would discourage the competitive spirit, and those with ambitions and ideas which give a hospital its individual and living stamp.

However, as regards uniform, there is very little encouragement given to those hospitals wishing to improve their designs and to experiment with new materials. There is very little published on the subject, and although other hospitals may have conducted experiments on the same lines as those of the Newcastle Regional Hospital Board, there appears to be no information as to the success or otherwise of these efforts. The sub-committee of the Nursing Services Advisory Committee of the Central Health Services Council which meets four times annually to discuss such questions, does not publish its reports, nor are there copies even for the Royal College of Nursing Library. Should there not be an open investigation and a published report? For example, one of the designs submitted to the Newcastle Regional Hospital Board was to have been made up in terylene, but it was stated that terylene was not to be obtained in this country at that time. Two years and more have passed, but still nobody seems to have tried out designs in terylene.

The argument put forward to excuse our apparent tardiness might be financial, but if the Ministry of Health were to set up a committee to experiment, a committee which would have among its members representatives of really first class designers, manufacturers, scientists and financial experts, the results would be of immense value. The committee could be justified on grounds of economy, since bad designs and materials waste money, money which eventually must come from the taxpayers' pocket. This is not to suggest that the Minister of Health should dictate to the hospitals, merely that the committee should act in an advisory capacity.

Whatever the design of her uniform, whatever the colour or the material, a nurse should appear well groomed at all times. Her uniform should be a source of pride to her, personifying neatness, cleanliness, a degree of authority and a professional attitude towards her patient. An unkempt nurse produces untidy work, and ultimately her patients will suffer, thereby destroying the whole concept of nursing, which is care for others.

HOSPITAL MEDICAL STAFFING

THE MEMBERSHIP of a working party on hospital medical staffing has been announced by the Minister of Health. The working party, which will elect its own chairman, is to study in the light of experience of the hospital service since 1948 and of all other relevant considerations, the principles on which the staffing structure in the hospital service should be organized.

The members are: Dr. R. R. Bomford, The London Hospital; Professor John Bruce, C.B.E., regius professor of clinical surgery, Edinburgh University; Dr. J. D. S. Cameron, C.B.E., physician, Edinburgh Royal Infirmary; Professor Andrew Claye, president, Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists; Sir Kenneth Cowan, chief medical officer, Department of Health for Scotland; Mr. H. C. Edwards, C.B.E., senior surgeon, King's College Hospital; Dr. G. E. Godber, deputy chief medical officer, Ministry of Health; Mr. Norman Graham, Under-Secretary Department of Health for Scotland; Dr. T. Rowland Hill, physician, West End Hospital of Neurology and Neurosurgery; Mr. J. E. Pater, C.B., Under-Secretary, Ministry of Health; Professor Robert Platt, president, Royal College of Physicians; Mr. T. Holmes Sellors, thoracic surgeon, The Middlesex Hospital.

The Ideal Maternity Service

by E. J. CLUNES, Superintendent Midwife, Southlands Hospital, Shoreham-by-Sea.

THE IDEAL MATERNITY SERVICE must be one which is safest for mother and baby, yet at the same time acceptable to childbearing women. It must be possible to run it at reasonable cost and with about the same number of staff as are available at present since more money is unlikely to be forthcoming, and an increase in recruitment to the nursing and midwifery services improbable.

A Single Employing Authority

An ideal service must end the present tripartite arrangement and replace it with one authority, responsible for maternity services. This body would employ doctors and midwives to work in hospital as well as in patients' homes, many of course on a part-time basis. It would also be responsible to hospital management committees for maternity departments and units.

This would result in the patient having the same standard of care by similar people whether she chose to have her confinement at home or in hospital; and it is the only method which is likely to break down the barriers between hospital and domiciliary services which decrease the efficiency of the present-day service.

The patient must be free to choose the place for her confinement; this is English tradition; yet her choice will most certainly be influenced by her medical advisers, the chatter of her neighbours and articles in newspapers and magazines. In the light of the recent report on the inquiries into the causes of maternal death, hospital delivery appears safer than delivery at home, therefore more women should be encouraged to have their babies in hospital.

If hospital confinement is to be advocated so is home nursing. Some patients for either medical or social reasons must not only be delivered in hospital but need to remain there until convalescent, at least 14 days. The rest of the women delivered in hospital, either by choice or in anticipation of complications which do not arise, could return home within 24 hours of delivery for nursing there. This would prevent early discharges from hospital half-way through the lying-in period which are so unsatisfactory for hospital and domiciliary midwives. A few patients, in whom no complications were anticipated, could still have home confinements if they wished.

This would mean an increase in both hospital confinements and domiciliary nursing. Since a single employing authority is planned the midwife normally working in the patient's home could work in hospital occasionally to maintain her skill and knowledge, while the hospital midwife could work in her place and refresh her knowledge of the home background of patients.

Such a scheme would undoubtedly deny the domiciliary midwife the satisfaction of delivering the baby, but at the same time it would make her duties less arduous and make the work appeal to more, even if different women. It would also enable the patient to receive all her care and advice after the birth from the same person, or people.

At some stage the health visitor must take over from the midwife. For those patients delivered and nursed in hospital this could well be on discharge. Health visitors should be encouraged to visit hospitals weekly, and learn about their patients. Alternatively, a written report could be given to each patient to pass on to the health visitor and the area health office telephoned on the day of discharge to ensure an early visit, yet at the same time avoiding unnecessary visits to patients detained for extra days.

The patient nursed at home should continue to be supervised by the midwife until after the post-natal examination six weeks following delivery. This would allow continuity of care throughout the puerperium and would enable the changeover to take place when breast-feeding was really established. It would reduce the number of very young babies on the health visitor's books, thereby allowing her time to pay them more frequent visits, while the midwife relieved of most of the deliveries would have the time to advise and help her patients right through the puerperium. Whether midwife or health visitor was responsible, two visits during the third and fourth weeks and one on the fifth and sixth weeks would be desirable.

Well-organized Prenatal Care

An ideal service must have well organized, good prenatal care at convenient times and distances for the patient. This presents little problem in towns where there are usually suitable premises, and attendances justify both running and staffing a clinic. In rural areas small clinics could be held weekly in the largest village of a group of villages. Today many village women spend much time and money in attending prenatal clinics, or else ignore advice and fail to receive prenatal care.

These clinics must be staffed by a team of doctors and midwives in both hospital and domiciliary practice with a consultant visiting weekly or fortnightly as the size of the clinic justifies. Where it is essential for a consultant's opinion to be given before his next visit to the clinic, the patient could either be seen at a neighbouring clinic or visited in her own home.

This arrangement would provide not only a meeting place for hospital and domiciliary staff, but would allow the patient to become familiar with the people who will look after her when and after the baby is born. During clinics, occasions would arise for interchange of ideas and experience and it is here that a new team spirit should develop between all who have the welfare of mother and baby at heart. These clinics would be unlikely to provide enough work and experience for all general practitioners in an area, but should certainly be attended by the obstetric member of a group practice.

The records of the prenatal period together with any special remarks or reports must be available at the confinement. This presents some difficulty when clinics are to be held in towns and villages. One solution is for the patient to take charge of her own notes, except for confidential reports which could be filed with the team responsible for her labour. Times are changing and since complications are usually described to the patient, and the prognosis for a patient well enough to attend a prenatal clinic is never grave, it would matter little if patients had access to their case-sheets.

Patients should have an opportunity to visit the hospital where they plan to be delivered. This could be in a series of mothercraft classes which for a while could continue to be held both locally and at the hospital.

Ambulances are essential for conveying to hospital most women in labour. The present system of the local health authority supplying ambulances is working well and early discharge of patients would increase the running costs of this service which is becoming increasingly expensive.

An emergency obstetric unit must still be available for treatment of serious emergencies at home. This could be based at the hospital as at present, and although it would rarely be used, in all probability, for post-partum haemorrhage, there will remain cases of antepartum haemorrhage and abortion that require treatment in the home before they can be moved to hospital with safety.

The medical service must be supported by adequate social services. Almoners and moral welfare workers could visit the larger prenatal clinics weekly and continue to advise the patient after her baby is born. Where prenatal clinics are small and social problems few, then appointments could be made for an interview at the clinic or at some other suitable place; many women may prefer to be seen outside their own district.

Residential nurseries, foster-homes and day nurseries will still be necessary for the care of young children, particularly from problem homes, while the mother is in hospital, and for some illegitimate babies. In my experience the present co-operation with the children's department could not be improved, and therefore should continue.

Hostels must be available for women needing shelter before and after their confinements and although these at present cater very well for the unmarried mother having her first child, other accommodation should be available for married women living apart from their husbands and women who have had several illegitimate children. On the whole, not enough real help can be given to those people at present.

The present home help service is good but its scope is limited by the lack of suitable recruits. If the demands of industry fall, more of the right type of women should be encouraged to become home helps. If more women are to be nursed at home, more home helps will be necessary, and some revision should be made in the insurance grants. The present maternity grant of £10 is a help, and the maternity allowance, supplemented where required by help from the National Assistance Board, enables a woman to give up work for the last three months of pregnancy. A grant should be given to women delivered and nursed, or just nursed, at home and either this should be enough to cover the cost of 20 hours' domestic help the first week, and about 10 hours' the second week (that is, about half the help that is needed), or else the patient receiving this care in hospital should be charged. This latter policy I consider would be a retrograde step, so more substantial home confinement grants would be needed.

The training of pupil midwives and medical students must be continued, and the present arrangements for the latter could continue in much the same way. Some alteration would be required in the essential experience of the pupil and although the present minimum of 30 deliveries during both parts of training should remain, not more than two or three of these are likely to take place in the patients' homes. However, the pupil could continue as at present to nurse women in their own homes for three months of her training, preferably the last three months.

Pathological services must be available for both institutional and domiciliary midwifery and since the majority of laboratories are both co-operative and obliging, it would be unnecessary to alter the present arrangement.

The key to the ideal maternity service is co-operation. There must be a team, always available, where no member works to himself but where every member works for the utmost benefit of mother and baby.

VISIT TO A LEPROSARIUM IN TANGANYIKA

As children, many of us will remember being told stories about lepers of Biblical times, and in our minds will have built up our own picture of these social outcasts. So it was with great interest and not a little speculation that I visited a leper colony or Leprosarium while I was in Tanganyika. The one at Kolo Ndoto is run by the African Inland Mission and is staffed by American missionaries. About forty years ago a Mr. Maynard and his wife who was a doctor came to Africa to start this mission station. Today, not only has it a school, the chapel, a small general hospital and a school of nursing, but it also includes a Leprosarium for the treatment of over 2,000 patients. Kolo Ndoto is about eight miles from the nearest native town of Shinyanga, and in the opposite direction, nine miles away, is the diamond mine at Mwadui. The surrounding country is very flat, hot and barren, and everywhere is the awful penetrating dust.

Clothed in just a string of beads (above), or 'full dress' with bead aprons (right). Note the umbilical hernia which is very common.

On my arrival at Kolo Ndoto I was first taken to the Leprosarium, which is situated about a quarter of a mile from the main station and is surrounded by a dense settlement of bandas or native huts. This is where the largest number of the lepers live, while having treatment, as the Leprosarium itself can only accommodate about 850 patients.

Every morning the 'in-patients' assemble in the large hall which has open walls because of the smell, and here they have prayers and singing. I was quite overwhelmed by the reception I was given, and for one hour I listened to various sections of this community singing their own tribal songs. The tiny children were especially sweet to watch as they showed me an action song. And then to my horror I found I was expected to reply to the speech of welcome that had been given by one of the headmen. My Swahili was not very good, but with a bit of help from the sister who runs this colony I was able to say a few words.

After this, I was introduced to representatives of all the 22 different tribes at that time treated, and they were fascinated by my camera and wanted to know how it worked! Next I visited the wards where serious cases of this disease are treated; the physiotherapy department where patients have wax baths to help exercise the 'claw' like hands that are a feature of one type of leprosy; I watched hundreds of the children line up for their medicine and vitamin supplements, which were administered by other patients who are now nearly cured, and help to care for others while waiting for their discharge.

Leprosy, mainly spread by direct contact with an 'open' case, is caused by the mycobacterium leprae or Hensen's Bacillus and occurs as two distinct types, lepromatous and tuberculoid, but occasionally a patient may show signs of both types at the same time. Lepromatous leprosy is characterized by ulcerating nodules on the face, fingers and toes and sometimes these also

1. "My sister", said Alice, looking up from a long letter, "is giving my mother heart attacks—because she is having one herself about her chief! He is a handsome man, but he's forty and married, happily, with two sons. Of course he is probably flattered a bit by Valerie's wide-eyed adoration over the typewriter; it makes her such a willing secretary, too! But Mother says she has told Val that if he's a 'nice man', in the end it will embarrass him and leave her feeling a broken-hearted fool . . . Mother is a forthright person!"

2. "I remember", said Helen, giving the idea that centuries separated this past of hers and the present, "when I had a touch of the trouble myself. About a psychiatrist! It was the turn of his ankle at a lecture that first caught my eye. That would have been all right, but we met at a dance afterwards . . . I began to have dreams about him (which I didn't tell him!) I even went to the trouble of finding out about his happy home life—and found myself slipping. Then I pulled myself together and accepted every date for the flicks, or anything else, to which anyone else asked me!"

3. "Yes," agreed Lois, "the great thing is not to get your imagination caught: once you do that, you become—to yourself—the important Other Woman, unable to enjoy being with 'eligibles' of your own age. After all, a happily married man is partly what his wife has helped to make him. If I get married, I shall hope to have some effect on my husband; we'll build up something together—even if it's only a wild war between us! I don't want to go on building on what someone else has begun . . ." "But", Helen asked, "what happens, old girl, if you marry a widower?" "That," Lois laughed, "is another problem and it hasn't cropped up yet!"

"I HAVE BEEN THINKING", said Alice, "about Val's case. I can see that some girls could easily let their 'hopeless love' for a married man be the excuse to themselves for never tackling the real and difficult business of emotional, unadult laziness . . . Ha! That sounds good, but what I really mean is I don't think it's worth the candle!" "Do you mean," argued Lois, rather fiercely, "that a girl can never fall in love with a married man?" "No" said Alice, "I mean its better not to!"

involve the conjunctiva, the mouth and larynx causing blindness or hoarseness. Over the years this disease goes through various stages of multiplication of the bacilli, involvement of tissue, and finally necrosis, and one can see many patients with 'burnt-out' leprosy—no longer infectious, but hideously disfigured and without fingers or toes, as a result of no treatment.

The second type, tuberculoid leprosy, involves peripheral neural dysfunction, thickening of many nerves and muscular wasting, particullary of the small muscles of the hand, causing 'claw' deformity. There is often thermal anaesthesia, facial paralysis and ulcerating sores of the feet.

Nowadays this terrible disease is treated by the sulphone drugs with very good results. But the big trouble is to overcome the fear and suspicions of those suffering from this affliction by adequate and far-reaching education of the Africans. Slowly they are being taught to bring active cases to hospital for treatment and isolation, to remove children at birth from leper parents (as this is not an inherited disease), and to examine all home contacts every six months for up to five years—the usual incubation period—to diagnose it at the earliest possible moment.

Treatment may take up to two years, and so in this Leprosarium there is a large school for all the children, and here I watched them give a very fine drill display and march-past complete with their own band. There is also a school for the older patients, who are mainly in their teens or early twenties and here they are taught some trade or craft, and so the Colony is almost self-supporting. Even one old African woman who had no fingers or toes was so adept at spinning cotton that she supported herself by this trade.

After this extremely interesting visit I was taken up to the main mission station where I met the three doctors and five nursing sisters who staff the hospital here. There are two large wards for men and women, a small but well-equipped theatre, a small X-ray room, a dispensary and out-patient building, and a maternity block for about 20 patients. There is also now a newly recognized training school for African nurses—the only one for hundreds of miles, but they were awaiting an English sister tutor.

In the theatre I watched with great interest a hernia repair, a glossectomy for carcinoma, a plastic repair of a badly scarred face, an emergency appendicectomy and the setting of a fractured femur! Then I was shown around the wards and met some of the patients, including a new arrival—a little boy of six months with Potts disease of the spine with a discharging and sinus marked kyphosis. There was also a patient with very bad keloid scarring over her back and chest, due to a witch doctor's 'medicine'. It was a dreadful sight.

Lastly I visited the African mission school for the local children, and then the tiny chapel which Mr. Maynard had built himself so many years ago, at the beginning of this venture, when it was a very small mission station battling against tremendous odds.

WE HEAR THAT . . . . .

The hospital ship being built in Holland for emergency duties in floods or disasters on the canals and inland waterways is to be used in normal times to give chronic and bedridden patients a holiday cruise. Isn't this an excellent idea?

A nurse writes to a Scottish newspaper that she was doing night duty while nursing in a private house. Her sleep was constantly interrupted by the chatter of visitors, and in despair she put a notice on the hall table: "Please remember the night nurse". When she came down in the evening there was a little pile of silver and coppers by the notice!

Lay Administration

MADAM.—I am wholly in agreement with Wrangler's statement that the matron and the doctor are losing status to the administrator. I believe that with the inception of the National Health Service there was a reaction to the old régime of the matron who was the 'Queen Bee' and who dominated the hospital. Many of them were fine women who gave their whole lives to their hospitals but there were, unfortunately, some who used their power unwisely and no one can reasonably regret their passing. In their place, however, we now have the administrator who has snatched this power and, however much one may hear about tripartite administration, the whole policy of the National Health Service plays into his hands.

A few months ago there was a crisis within this region and the hospital concerned urgently needed additional nursing staff. The request for this help came from the regional board not to the matrons but to the secretaries. Every matron in the region most willingly gave what help she could, but when the crisis was over the letter of thanks came, not to the matrons, but to the secretaries.

On several occasions within the year I have, as matron of the hospital, attended various social functions in connection with meetings and conferences of hospital administrators within this region which have been held in the hospital. Without exception the administrators all talk of 'My hospital'—with a heavy accent on the 'my', and even of 'My matron' and 'My doctors'. One of them even told me what was meant to be a funny story of a well known consultant, just retired, who had been a real character and a man of great professional and moral stature. He had ruled his housemen and sisters with a rod of iron and caused many a young student to quake at the knees. "Of course"—said the secretary—"we won't put up with that sort of nonsense now." Only good manners kept me from making the retort such a statement deserved.

I think that we matrons are much to blame for allowing this to happen. We have not fought to defend our status, we have allowed ourselves to be pushed aside and to be placated with some soft words and blandishments. Too many of us feel it is infra dig. to fight back and, in truth, we are sometimes afraid, because we feel we are fighting against the policy of a service which seeks any excuse to be rid of us. Not one of us can fight this alone. We need the full and real support of our College and our Association. The hospitals cannot be run without us whatever the Institute of Hospital Administrators or the Minister of Health may think.

We have the power if we would but use it, so let there be an end to this ladylike shilly-shallying and let us stand strongly together in our demands. We want, and should have, full membership of our management committees—we must demand this, not cap in hand and with a by your leave, but as an indisputable right which cannot be questioned.

MILITANT.

MADAM.—Your superb new columnist, Wrangler, is right to stimulate discussion on this very important topic of the status of the matron and her relations with lay and medical administrators.

Equality, however, will only become a fact if the essential function of the matron is well defined and recognized. In a paper published some time ago in The Hospital ('Truly Tripartite'. The Hospital, 53, 109), I suggested that "the case for a tripartite administration springs not only from the traditional balance of power in the hospital, but from the triune structure of the hospital as a clinic, an economic entity and a community of staff and patients."

I pointed out that increasing attention was being paid in other fields to the personnel function. "Within the hospital service the importance of thought-out personnel policies is being increasingly appreciated. . . .

"It would seem logical to unify staff leadership in the person of the professional head of the largest staff group, more especially as that group spends its working life administering at all levels in the hospital and coping with problems of relationships on the spot, before they can reach the secretary's or any other office."

I ask your indulgence for this extended quotation from myself because I should like to know the reactions of the profession to this approach in the light of the present discussion. It seems to me that the path of co-operation might be considerably eased if we could secure recognition of the division of the administration of hospitals into the business, the medical, and the personnel functions, and if we could demonstrate that nurses are adequately prepared to assume the personnel function. If we could not demonstrate this in the context of the present professional and training structure, then it might be well to look again at that structure in the light of this aim.

However patient-centred we are, we must recognize that it is important that the hospital shall be managed in a businesslike way. The secretary's job, and that of his staff, is therefore a vital one. But it seems to me to be no less important, and in no way detracting from the rightful position of the secretary, that all non-medical staff who come into direct contact with the patient shall be under the control of one who has herself first-hand experience of the wards and departments and of therapeutic relationships with patients—the matron.

BRIAN WATKIN, S.R.N.

Apartheid

MADAM.—Concluding her letter on apartheid Jane Symonds of the Africa Bureau hopes "that nurses and others in the health service will urgently consider how they can help those in South Africa who are opposing apartheid in all fields particularly in that of medicine."

Even after consideration some may be in doubt as to how to help. To those I suggest a practical way of helping—send a donation to the fund founded by Canon John Collins of St. Paul's Cathedral. This is the Christian Action Legal Defence Fund and its object is to pay for the legal defence of those (black, white or brown) who are now standing trial for their lives for their opposition to the apartheid policy. The fund is sponsored by men of international repute—the Bishop of Johannesburg, Father Trevor Huddleston, Kingsley Martin, Solly Sachs, etc.

Colleagues—nurses and doctors—may well be among the 156 South Africans who, because they obey a greater loyalty, are being charged with treason to the present nationalist government in South Africa.

RACHAEL M. SIMPSON.

College Membership

MADAM.—May I correct what I believe to be a mistaken impression being laboured under by your correspondent D. G. Williams?

The State-enrolled assistant nurses of this country have their own professional organization, membership of which is open to S.E.A.N.s of either sex and which welcomes pupil assistant nurses as associate members. The National Association of State Enrolled Assistant Nurses is affiliated to the Royal College of Nursing, in which affiliation it takes much pride; it is not considered that any alteration in this relationship would be to the advantage of either body.

It is therefore with some astonishment that I read of the 'vexed question' of altering the charter of the College to permit membership of S.E.A.N.s, although the suggestion that this be amended to allow membership of nurses on other parts of the Register is of course a hardy perennial.

Miss E. Graham Smith

We regret to announce the death of Miss Elizabeth Graham Smith, S.E.A.N., after a few hours' illness at East Fortune Hospital, Drem, North Berwick. She collapsed while on duty and did not regain consciousness. Miss Smith had been in poor health for some years. A colleague writes: "She will be much missed by all her colleagues for her willing and cheerful presence and her good humour. She joined the staff of this hospital in 1941 and has completed 17 years of faithful and devoted service. It is proposed to put a memorial to Miss Smith in the hospital chapel."

Miss A. Knowles

We regret to announce the sudden death of Miss Abigail Knowles on May 7. Miss Knowles trained at the Salford Union Infirmary from 1919-22, and was ward sister at Alder Hey Hospital, Liverpool, until 1925; she held the same post at the Chester City Hospital for a further five years. After taking the Housekeeping Certificate at the North Staffs. Royal Infirmary, she held the post of housekeeping sister at the North Wales Sanatorium, Denbigh. A colleague writes: "Those who knew Miss Knowles will always remember the keen, efficient interest which she took in her work which endeared her to her patients, and her cheerful good humour and dry wit."

NURSE NOVELISTS

A novel by a former sister of St. Chad's and the Children's Hospitals, Birmingham has been accepted for serialization in a woman's magazine. Last year Mrs. Gilzean gave up nursing to write and her first book, On call, Sister, was based on her nursing career. We are publishing here a review of another of Mrs. Gilzean's books, Next Patient, Doctor Anne, by another nurse novelist, Lucilla Andrews, author of The Quiet Wards, who has also had her books serialized.

NEXT PATIENT, DOCTOR ANNE.—by Elizabeth Gilzean. (Mills and Boon, 10s. 6d.)

This is a novel of hospital life as seen from the angle of first, a medical student and, later, of a newly qualified doctor.

The student is a young woman, Anne Greenslade, and the story is concerned with her life from her first bitter disappointment at failing the medical school entrance examination, to the achievement of her ambition to become a doctor. Woven into the story is her love for Jonathan Moore, the boy-next-door, son of the local G.P., who has been bound for a medical career since his cradle. Jonathan passes into medical school a year ahead of Anne and the gulf between them is widened by his friendship with the beautiful, brilliant and slightly unreal daughter of the professor of surgery. However, the novel ends on a happy note, with Anne and Jonathan in dual harness as housemen, with their marriage planned to take place after Jonathan passes Primary.

Mrs. Gilzean writes easily and with obvious authenticity. Anne Greenslade is a well-drawn and sympathetic figure who comes vividly to life, particularly in the scenes in which she deals with her patients and their relatives. Jonathan Moore and the other young, and not-so-young, doctors, are all typical hospital residents, and the patients are portrayed with sympathy and honesty.

There is little plot to the story, but this would seem unimportant, since Mrs. Gilzean is chiefly concerned with the mental and professional development of a shy young woman who becomes a competent house surgeon. Anne's work, romance, occasional mistakes and the many obstacles she encounters through being a woman in a profession in which men still predominate and rule, make interesting reading. Her relations with her family are refreshingly normal and add to the authentic tone of the whole book.

Only when describing her nurses did Mrs. Gilzean seem to me to come a little close to caricature. Not all ward sisters are icily efficient—or all probationer nurses 'little'. Yet these are minor points, and I recommend this book to anyone interested in hospital novels. It will neither infuriate the professional reader with tiresome inaccuracies, nor frighten the lay public with unnecessarily dramatic details. The author clearly knows and loves hospital life and has taken great pains to allow her readers to do the same.

LIVING ALONE

HOUSING for single people—and especially women—has up to now had scant consideration from local authorities. The prior claims of families are obvious, and with the claims of the elderly to special accommodation being increasingly considered, up till recent years the single person's needs were entirely overlooked in housing plans. Single people are taxpayers—and even if indirectly—ratepayers and thus contribute to the subsidy on housing; it seems scant justice that (with one or two exceptions) they should have been allotted no share at all.

Some single people have been occupying houses too big for them and expensive to run. If single unit accommodation could be found for them, such houses would be free for families—a much more economic proposition.

Various organizations have been active in pressing the claims of the single worker during the post-war years. The British Federation of Business and Professional Women made representations to the Minister of Health on the subject in 1947, and in 1956 a deputation went to the Ministry of Housing and Local Government from the National Association of Women Civil Servants. These major efforts, as well as much general propaganda, resulted in a growing realization in official quarters of the needs of single persons, and it was officially suggested to local authorities that some accommodation might be included for them when considering housing for the elderly.

The National Association of Women Civil Servants was thus encouraged to issue a questionnaire to local authorities to find out what progress had been made, and they have now reported on the result. Glasgow, apparently a pioneer in providing this type of housing, had already in 1933 provided three hostels each containing 33 flats, and the city seemed well aware of this crying need. In London, Hackney Borough provided 96 flats for single women, largely on the Glasgow model.

The recent questionnaire revealed that in 62 cases up and down the country some provision had been made, and in 25, action was being taken, while in 31 cases future provision was possible and 17 were making no provision. No reply, or a non-committal one, was the result in 38 instances. Though the provision varies in quantity, in amount of rent, and in type, it is encouraging to note that over half the 173 local authorities circularized had recognized the claim of the single worker and that many of these were actively providing it.

Blackburn Corporation

Paying for Gas Fires Blackburn Corporation has agreed that it is unreasonable to expect district nurses—called out on duty in the middle of the night—to have to spend a shilling to operate the gas fires in their bedrooms.

The Corporation has authorized the matron of the District Nurses Home to refund shillings used in this way and is asking the North Western Gas Board if it is possible for tokens to be issued to operate these gas fires.

Hertfordshire County Council

A Whitley Council award lays down that where a nurse occupies a Council house she is entitled to pay a reduced rent amounting to £1 a week for unfurnished accommodation or £1 10s. a week for furnished accommodation. Is there anything that the employing authority can do for a nurse who occupies a privately owned house and pays a rent in excess of this Whitley Council scale?

This was a problem which recently confronted the health committee of Hertfordshire County Council.

It was pointed out that the county council had no power to reimburse the nurse with part of her rent but that there was nothing to prevent them acquiring the freehold of the house and letting it to the nurse at the Whitley scale rental. This they decided to do. The house was found to be in good order—it had in fact been improved by its tenant—and the owner was willing to sell subject to a continuance of the nurse's tenancy. A price of £1,350 was agreed between the Council and the owner and the Council undertook to pay all surveyor's fees and legal charges.

Aberdeen Corporation

After-care of those discharged from Mental Hospitals Aberdeen's medical officer of health has been authorized to "enter into arrangements with the medical authorities at Kingseat Mental Hospital whereby one of the Corporation's health visitors may attend regularly at the hospital in order to meet, and to exchange with the hospital authorities, information regarding patients who are about to be discharged . . . and with whose care the health visitor will be concerned."

At the same meeting the Corporation decided to convert Westbank, 19, Fonthill Road, Aberdeen, which they had recently acquired at a cost of £1,300, for use as an occupational centre for mentally handicapped persons.

Revision of Public Health Establishment After considering recommendations of the medical officer of health aimed at "improving the Corporation's health visiting service and affording better prospects of promotion therein", Aberdeen Corporation decided to revise the establishment of its Health and Welfare Department. With effect from June 1 there are to be 73, instead of 70, health visitors on the establishment, the post of senior health visitor is to be abolished but there are to be 12 instead of 11 centre superintendents.

The corporation also decided to grant nine months paid leave of absence to a centre superintendent to be nominated by the medical officer of health to enable her to take the appropriate qualification for appointment as a health visitor tutor.

Concern was expressed at the report of the medical officer that "some significant deterioration had taken place" with regard to certain aspects of public health in the city. The Corporation is to draw the attention of the Management Side of the Nurses and Midwives Whitley Council to the need to increase the recruitment of health visitors and to review the salary scales of these officers "with due regard to the remuneration applicable to certain comparable posts in other occupations".

In the meantime the Corporation is to make a special payment to members of the health department staff who give lectures—outside normal working hours—in connection with Aberdeen's Health Guidance Scheme.

Borough of Lewisham

Notifications of Tuberculosis Following expressions of concern at the number of cases of tuberculosis notified within the borough in recent years, Lewisham's medical officer of health has submitted a comprehensive report on the subject to the council's Public Health Committee.

The report shows that while the number of notifications of pulmonary tuberculosis has dropped from 367 in 1947 to 220 in 1957, this reduction has been by no means consistent year by year. In 1948 there were, for example, 448 notifications while in 1956 the figure was 195—the lowest recorded in the 10 years under consideration.

The medical officer of health considered that "one reason for the continued high number of notifications may be the fact that recent propaganda, including mass radiography, has been directed towards discovering cases of tuberculosis at an early stage, when cure is easier and before contacts are exposed to sources of infection."

Investigations have recently been carried out into the high incidence of tuberculosis notifications, not only in Lewisham, but all over the country. Results have indicated a high percentage of active tuberculosis among immigrants from Cyprus and a very high percentage among those from the Irish Republic. The incidence of tuberculosis among West Indian immigrants appears however to be below the British national average.

The results of a recent study carried out by a mass radiography unit in one area showed that the rates per thousand of cases of active tuberculosis among persons examined were 5.7 for persons born in the United Kingdom, 4 for West Indians, 16 for Cypriots and 42 for immigrants from the Irish Republic.

Brighton Corporation

Sound-proofing Midwives' Flats Brighton's Public Health Committee, in approving plans for the conversion of an existing house into two flats for municipal midwives, showed an appreciation of the erratic hours that they work.

The house—at Brighton's Whitehawk Clinic—is to be converted so as to provide a self-contained flat on each floor. The basic cost of conversion was estimated at £950 but no allowance was made in the estimate for sound-proofing the floor over the lower flat.

The extra cost of sound-proofing was expected to be in the region of £100. The committee evidently considered that their midwives' off-duty sleep was well worth £100 because they approved the revised scheme—including sound-proofing—at a total cost of £1,050.

London County Council

Salary increases for Senior Nursing Staff In giving effect to the recent recommendations of The Nurses and Midwives Whitley Council (as set out in circular NMC 74) the LCC has taken steps to grant comparable salary increases to their more senior nursing staff who are not covered by the terms of the award.

With effect from July 1, 1957, their chief nursing officer is to have a salary ranging from £1,365 to £1,575 per annum, the deputy chief's salary is to be from £1,065 to £1,275 and the senior assistant nursing officer is to be on a scale rising from £720 to £835 per annum. Health visitor tutors (uncertificated) are to receive from £695 to £790 per annum.

News in Brief

"THE TRUTH IS that there are few, too few, local girls who enter our training school", said Dr. J. Pickford Marsden, physician of Joyce Green, Dartford, when addressing the nurses at the recent prize-giving ceremony at the hospital.

MISS JOAN SWEETMAN, a former sister tutor of South Shields General Hospital, has been appointed deputy matron of St. Catherine's Hospital, Birkenhead, Cheshire.

A FAREWELL PARTY was held at St. Faith's Hospital, Brentwood, recently for Miss Florence E. Davey, who retired on her 61st birthday after 17 years' service with the hospital.

ONE RESULT OF THE RECENT DOCK STRIKE has proved beneficial to the nursing profession—through the generosity of a group of volunteer dockers who had handled perishable goods in the Regent's Canal area. They had earned £45 which they gave to the nurses home of the Queen Elizabeth Home for Children, Stepney.

MISS F. E. GREAVES, deputy matron of Hawtonville Hospital, Newark, has retired after 24 years' service at the hospital, 18 as deputy matron.

AN HOUR'S REQUEST PROGRAMME of records is broadcast every morning to an audience of about 60 children and 40 nurses at the Belgrave Hospital for Children at Kennington Oval.

THE NATIONAL SPASTICS SOCIETY is hoping to establish a community of spastic children housed in villas around a central unit. It is estimated that there are 3,000 ineducable spastics in the country, and this project for 120 children would cost £150,000.

Recently the residents of Bexley, Sussex, have protested against the taking over of a house for spastic children's holidays saying it would cause a depreciation in the social amenities of the neighbourhood.

MISS M. CLAYFIELD, sister tutor at Queen Mary's Hospital nurse training school, Sidcup, recently addressed Sidcup and St. Paul's Cray Young Conservatives on hospital life.

A NEW WARD, to replace a previous one destroyed by fire, was recently opened at the Marlborough Children's Convalescent Hospital by Sir George Schuster, chairman of Oxford Regional Hospital Board.

MISS E. M. WINROW, matron of St. John's Hospital, Lewisham, has been appointed to a special sub-committee of the regional Area Nurse Training Committee, set up to consider proposals for the revision of the conditions of approval to use hospitals as general training schools.

THE HOSPITAL SATURDAY FUND announces that it will pay members of its A scheme half the cost up to £3 for home help supplied by local authorities.

BRIDGWATER HOSPITAL.—A new nurses' training unit and physiotherapy department has been opened. The new unit and department, including equipment, has cost about £27,000.

CHINGFORD DISTRICT NURSING ASSOCIATION want to give £3,000 towards six new almshouses for the poor and the aged of the borough, but before they can do so, members who attended an extraordinary meeting in June 1950 have to be contacted and they must agree to the new proposal before it can be put before the Charity Commission. It was previously decided that the money be used for providing a mobile physiotherapy unit, but ultimately this cost only £125 which left the large sum which is now to be disposed of.

KILLEARN HOSPITAL SPORTS. Gaily decorated beds which won prizes at the annual sports; there were many new ideas and judging was a difficult task.

MISS MARGARET BRIDGEMAN has been appointed matron of the New Sussex Hospital; she was previously matron of Foredown Hospital and has served as assistant matron at Brighton General Hospital.

MR. JIM MCKIE, who was the Independent Labour Party's candidate in the North Islington by-election, was refused permission to address the nursing staff at Whittington Hospital, London. Dr. C. D. Coyle, the medical superintendent, told Mr. McKie that political activities could not be allowed in the hospital.

MR. A. R. HORSHAM, F.C.I.S., F.C.C.S. F.R.ECON.S., has been appointed secretary of the Royal Institute of Public Health and Hygiene.

JOINT NURSING AND MIDWIVES COUNCIL, NORTHERN IRELAND.—The number of successful nurses in the final state examinations held in May 1958 are as follows: general 105; mental 20; fever 9; sick children's 12.

CHADWICK TRUST APPOINTMENT.—Mr. P. Arthur Wells has been appointed clerk of the Chadwick Trust.

In Parliament

Private nursery groups; Wessex regional board; Princess Louise (Kensington) Hospital; Poliomyelitis vaccine; Research exchange with U.S.S.R.; Lewisham disaster; Morphine and heroin addiction.

MR. KING (Southampton, Itchen) asked the Minister of Education on June 10 what was the number of private nursery groups registered in connection with the Nurseries and Child Minders Act.

Mr. Walker-Smith, who replied, stated.—At the end of December 1957, the latest date for which figures are available, 90 nurseries in factories, 406 nurseries in other premises and 949 daily minders were registered under the Nurseries and Child Minders Act 1948. They were providing for 3,733, 8,810 and 7,536 children respectively.

Dr. Bennett (Gosport) asked the Home Secretary on June 12 whether, in view of the reference to the Poisons Board of the soporific drugs carbromal and bromvaletone, he would similarly refer aspirins to the board as having similar properties of habit-formation and more than 10 times greater record of use in attempted suicide.

Mr. Butler.—No, carbromal and bromvaletone were referred because of evidence that preparations containing them can cause harmful personality changes if consumed to excess. This does not apply to aspirin.

Mr. John Eden (Bournemouth, West) asked the Minister of Health on June 13 if he had yet come to a decision as to the date on which it would be possible to set up a separate Wessex Regional Hospital Board for the South West Metropolitan Region.

Mr. Walker-Smith.—Yes. I have decided that it will be possible to do so on April 1 next and I am taking the necessary steps to bring the new region and regional hospital board into being on that date.

Lord Balfour of Burleigh asked the Government in the House of Lords on June 16 whether the Minister of Health could now give his decision on the future of the Princess Louise (Kensington) Hospital for Children.

Lord Strathclyde, Minister of State, Scottish office, replied.—This matter concerns a proposal made to the Minister of Health by the Board of Governors of St. Mary's Hospital that for a temporary period during adaptations of the maternity unit at St. Mary's Hospital two wards at Princess Louise Hospital should be used for maternity patients; and that thereafter the hospital should become a hospital for adults.

The Minister has had regard also to the terms of a restrictive covenant attaching to the land on which Princess Louise Hospital stands, which limits the use of the building to that of a hospital for children with maternity wards, and to his obligation under the National Health Service Act 1946. All these considerations have led him to the conclusion that he would be justified in approving the temporary use of two wards for maternity patients, but that he should not approve the long-term use of the hospital for adults, but should review its future again towards the end of the period of temporary use for maternity purposes.

Mr. Janner (Leicester, North-West) asked the Minister of Health on June 16 what were the categories of persons for whom registration was at present accepted for vaccination against poliomyelitis; and when he anticipated he would be able to extend the priority to other categories.

He also asked the Minister when he anticipated there would be enough vaccine against poliomyelitis for all persons at present registered to have the full three vaccinations.

Mr. Walker-Smith.—The classes at present eligible for vaccination are children over six months old born in or after 1943, expectant mothers, general practitioners, ambulance staff, hospital staff whose work brings them into contact with acute poliomyelitis, and the families of the last three groups.

By April 30, the latest date for which detailed information is available, over 3 million persons in Britain had been vaccinated with two injections, just over 2½ million were awaiting vaccination and a further ½ million were awaiting their second injection. On that date the local health authorities held 1 million doses of vaccine and they have since received over 5 million more.

This is more than sufficient to complete the vaccination with two doses of all persons registered by April 30 if they are willing to accept the type of vaccine available.

Mr. Janner.—Is the Minister aware that his answer will cause very considerable anxiety? Is he aware that some of the categories outside those he has mentioned feel very aggrieved at the idea that they will not be vaccinated, particularly people in the sanitary service?

When is the Minister going to get sufficient vaccine to enable the three doses, which are essential, to be given and for the appropriate categories to be dealt with?

Mr. Walker-Smith.—I made a statement pointing out that sufficient vaccine is available to deal with the programme we have announced. I should have thought that would cause gratification to all right-thinking people.

Sir Frank Medlicott (Norfolk, Central) asked the Minister what exchange of information and research into the causes of cancer took place between the appropriate official authorities and organizations in the United Kingdom and the Soviet Union.

Mr. Walker-Smith.—Experience has proved that the most valuable international scientific liaison is that which takes place on an informal and individual basis and such communication between the Soviet Union and Britain has recently shown signs of increasing. The attendance of a number of Russian experts at the International Cancer Congress in London next month will provide a further opportunity for useful contacts to be made in this field of research.

Mr. Herbert Morrison (Lewisham, South) asked the Minister whether he had considered the report on emergency telephone and other arrangements at Lewisham Hospital in connection with the Southern Region railway disaster at St. John's.

Mr. Walker-Smith.—Yes; in general the arrangements appear to have worked well, and I should like to take this opportunity of paying a tribute to all who took part in meeting a very difficult situation. Detailed points have been discussed by representatives of the services concerned, and steps have been taken in this region to arrange for ex-directory lines at major hospitals and for a review of their telephone communications. The report has been circulated to all regional hospital boards, and consideration is being given to certain matters by my officers with a view to further action if required.

Sir Hugh Linstead (Putney) asked the Minister whether he would now review the advice given by the Departmental Committee on Morphine and Heroin Addiction in 1926.

Mr. Walker Smith.—Yes. In consultation with the Home Secretary, the Secretary of State for Scotland and I have appointed a committee with the following terms of reference:

To review in the light of more recent developments the advice given by the Departmental Committee on Morphine and Heroin Addiction in 1926; to consider whether any revised advice should also cover other drugs liable to produce addiction or to be habit-forming; to consider whether there is a medical need to provide special, including institutional, treatment outside the resources already available, for persons addicted to drugs; and to make recommendations.

The membership of the committee is: Sir Russell Brain (chairman), Mr. Laurence Abel, Mr. D. M. Dunlop, Mr. Donald W. Hudson, Mr. A. D. Macdonald, Mr. A. H. Macklin, Mr. S. Noy Scott, and Mr. M. A. Partridge.

HERE and THERE

INFANTICIDE OR BIRTH CONTROL

SIR RUSSELL BRAIN, president of the Family Planning Association, speaking at the annual general meeting said that the choice for the world lay between famine, starvation and infanticide on one hand, and conception control on the other. The world population was fast outstripping the world's food situation. In Singapore alone more than 1,000 children extra a week were requiring food, education and teachers.

The Lambeth Conference was about to consider the report of a commission, set up at the Archbishop of Canterbury's request, on the theological aspect of birth control in the light of modern population statistics. The attitude of the Church of England had become increasingly sympathetic towards family planning which was fast becoming a world necessity.

RETIREMENT IN ARGYLL

MISS MADGE GILLIES has retired after 18 years as matron of the Mid-Argyll Hospital, Lochgilphead. At a ceremony held in early June to mark the occasion, Miss Gillies was presented with a cheque by Sir George Campbell, Bt., chairman of the Board of Management for Lochgilphead Hospitals. The cheque was raised by public subscription.

DRUGS AND DRESSINGS

FOLLOWING the report of the Drugs and Dressings Sub-committee, Liverpool Regional Hospital Board has agreed that inquiries should be made at certain hospitals in the region where expenditure on cortisone has risen considerably above the general level. The committee further agreed that another appeal should be made to committees and advisory boards to supervise more closely the expenditure on drugs and dressings and medical and surgical appliances. Hospital medical staffs should be asked to exercise more control when prescribing expensive drugs and sisters in charge of wards to supervise the use of drugs more carefully.

LEAGUE OF REMEMBRANCE (1914-45)

THE League of Remembrance held a house-warming reception on June 3 in the Hall of Remembrance, two rooms which form the latest extension of the headquarters at 28, Great Ormond Street, London. Flags, ships' bells, swords and other symbols of the armed services, line the walls of the two rooms and help to create a fitting memorial to the dead of two world wars. The League was founded in 1914 and exists to help the widows and dependants of officers of the three armed services and the nursing services. Donations may be sent to the Hon. treasurer at 32, Great Ormond Street, London, W.C.1.

WINDFALL FOR DUNFERMLINE

DUNFERMLINE and West Fife Hospital has received a windfall of $36,400 from the original $145,000 Bishop bequest. This bequest was the subject of legal action in the American courts which ultimately went in favour of the hospital. Now the U.S. courts have ruled that no Federal Tax will be charged on the money remaining if it is cleared from America promptly.

Miss Godden presented Mrs. Childs with a cheque in appreciation of all the work she had done as hon. secretary of the Branch, on behalf of the members. At tea Miss Godden talked to the members informally and answered many questions.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF NURSING APPEAL

for the Nation's Fund for Nurses

"We had a very happy coffee morning". (Extract from a letter received this week.) Of course it was a happy morning because there was a group of people working together to help their colleagues. The result may be seen in the list below and it is easy to see that much hard work was done and many cups of coffee served! Our thanks are sent to all the members of this group and to everyone else who has made up our good total this week. We acknowledge with thanks gifts from Mrs. Townsend, Mrs. Gusterson and Miss Smith.

Nurses in the Honours

Miss F. A. Burton, B.E.M., with patient.

MISS F. N. UDELL, chief nursing officer at the Colonial office since 1946, receives the C.B.E. Miss Udell is a member of the Council of the Royal College of Nursing and a fellow and member of the Royal Society of Health. After holding ward sisters' posts and working as a health visitor in rural and urban areas, Miss Udell joined the staff of the College, where she was secretary to the Public Health Section, area organizer for Scotland and secretary of the Scottish Board. In 1944 she was appointed chief nurse, European Regional office, U.N.R.R.A., and has travelled widely in Europe, the Middle East and the British Commonwealth.

MISS ADA MASTERS, ward sister, Wingfield Morris Orthopaedic Hospital, receives the M.B.E. After training at the Radcliffe Infirmary, Oxford, Miss Masters joined the staff of the hospital in 1927, and was appointed sister of the women's ward and private ward; since 1935 she has been in charge of the private wards. Miss Masters was one of the first examiners for the Orthopaedic Nursing Certificate and for several years was also superintendent of the Oxfordshire division of the British Red Cross, examining and lecturing over a wide area.

MRS. ELEANOR GODSON, health visitor in Shrewsbury, is another recipient of the M.B.E. Mrs. Godson trained at Addenbrooke's Hospital, Cambridge, and took midwifery at Myddleton Square, London, where she also worked on the staff. After a period of health visiting at the North Hull clinic, Kingston-upon-Hull, she went to Shrewsbury in 1941.

MR. JOHN MORRISON, chief male nurse at Carstairs State Mental Hospital and State Institution since 1948, who received the M.B.E., trained at Glengall Mental Hospital, Ayr, and qualified in 1930. With the exception of the war years, when he was a Sergeant in the R.A.M.C., Mr. Morrison has continued mental nursing.

MISS MARY STARK, matron of Adamson Hospital, Cupar, Fife, for 29 years, receives the M.B.E. A native of Lanarkshire, she began her training at the Women's and Children's Hospital, Edinburgh, and completed it at Dundee Royal Infirmary. In 1950 Miss Stark was presented with a cheque for £500 and a silver salver in appreciation of her devoted services to the community as matron of the hospital.

MISS FLORENCE A. BURTON, assistant nurse, St. Margaret's Hospital, Epping, receives the B.E.M. Miss Burton started her training at West Park Mental Hospital, Epsom, and finished it at Claybury Mental Hospital, Essex, in 1932. In the same year she moved to Epping and took up a position as assistant nurse after two years' training.

MRS. RUBY P. THOMPSON, awarded the M.B.E., is a home nurse with Middlesex County Council. She started her training at Grove Park Hospital, London, S.E.12, where the patients were mainly ex-servicemen of the 1914-18 war. After general, midwifery and Queen's nurse training, and a period on the district in Co. Durham, Mrs. Thompson went to Bermuda with the Bermuda Welfare Society. She established a baby clinic and in her spare time taught first aid and home nursing. After her marriage Mrs. Thompson nursed for a time at Baltimore City Hospital, U.S.A.

Mrs. R. Thompson (M.B.E.)

Mr. F. Marshall (M.B.E.)

Miss A. Masters (M.B.E.)

Mr. J. Morrison (M.B.E.)

Miss F. N. Udell (C.B.E.)

MR. FREDERICK MARSHALL, charge nurse at Parkside Hospital, Macclesfield, since 1955, also receives the M.B.E. He began his training at the hospital in 1934, qualified in 1937, and in 1948 was appointed deputy charge nurse.

LIEUT. COL. M. B. KNEEBONE, Q.A.R.A.N.C., has been awarded the R.R.C. Lieut. Col. Kneebone trained at St. Mary's Hospital for Women and Children, Plaistow, and at the West London Hospital, Hammersmith. She served in the U.K., India, the Middle East and North West Europe from 1933-49, and is leaving for Malta in the near future.

MISS NANCY H. GLEW, SUPERINTENDING SISTER, Q.A.R.N.N.S., becomes an A.R.R.C. Miss Glew trained at Acton General Hospital and joined the naval nursing service in 1942. She served two commissions in the Far East, Ceylon and Hong Kong and is now serving at the Royal Naval Hospital, Bighi, Malta.

MAJOR E. H. LITHERLAND, Q.A.R.A.N.C., also becomes an A.R.R.C. Before training Major Litherland spent two years at Princess Margaret Rose Hospital, Edinburgh, and then trained at Edinburgh Royal Infirmary.

MAJOR JOAN L. SALMON, Q.A.R.A.N.C., who becomes an A.R.R.C., trained at Charing Cross Hospital. She joined the army nursing service in 1943 and has served in India, Germany, Malta; she is to be posted to Malaya in July.

SQUADRON OFFICER IRENE M. TURNER, P.M.R.A.F.N.S., awarded the A.R.R.C., trained at the Hospital for Epilepsy and Paralysis, London, and at the Royal Northern Hospital, Holloway, where she was a theatre staff nurse. In 1941 she joined P.M.R.A.F.N.S. and has served as ward sister in R.A.F. hospitals in Tripoli, Palestine and Germany up till 1950. Since then she has served as theatre sister in various hospitals of the R.A.F. in this country, and is now a sister-in-charge of R.A.F. Station Sick Quarters.

TEXTBOOK OF HUMAN ANATOMY

By Professors J. D. BOYD, SIR WILFRED E. Le GROS CLARK, W. J. HAMILTON (Editor), J. M. YOFFEY, SIR SOLLY ZUCKERMAN, and the late A. B. APPLETON.

The aim of the six distinguished anatomists who have written this new work is to provide a textbook that takes into account the great changes which have occurred in recent years in both orientation and content of anatomical teaching.

In attempting to integrate factual data with functional considerations, the arrangement of the book differs in some important respects from other standard textbooks. For example, the bony elements of the skeleton are considered in the same section with the joints and muscles, so that the student approaches the study of the locomotor system as a whole.

Without sacrificing any of the topographical information which will always be essential for the non-specialist medical practitioner, this book covers the field of anatomical knowledge which the medical student is expected to have acquired by the end of his pre-clinical course.

While designed primarily for medical students, it is also suitable for students of physiotherapy, radiotherapy, dentistry, physical education, as well as biologists generally.

1,040 pages 10½ × 7⅝ inches Printed on art paper

Profusely illustrated with drawings (most of them in colour) by A. K. Maxwell and Frank B. Price, and micro-photographs. £5

Kiddies need no coaxing with this new form of Achromycin V

Here's an entirely new form of ACHROMYCIN V especially designed to simplify the control of infection in children and infants. ACHROMYCIN V Pediatric Drops Aqueous—delightfully flavoured with orange—make a particular appeal to the child who turns awkward when it's time to take his medicine.

The product contains ACHROMYCIN tetracycline with citric acid and sodium citrate for more rapid absorption and higher levels of the antibiotic in the blood.

Thus infection can be promptly controlled and the child's recovery accelerated. Accurate dosage can be measured drop by drop from the pliable plastic bottle (5 mg. of tetracycline per drop). The product can be given directly onto the tongue or added to water or fruit juice.

NURSES all over the world use DALMAS

Once Dalmas dressings have been introduced into a country, nurses there realise how efficient they are, and use them constantly. Dalmas are completely hygienic under all conditions, and will not peel off or fray, even when placed on awkward joints. They are waterproof, skin-coloured, and flex with every movement. In fact, they're perfectly suited to your work—that's why conscientious nurses everywhere use them.

Dalmas are available in small handy size boxes or in larger cabinets with up to 180 dressings in each. See your own supplier about them.
